(1850- )

A kingdom in southwestern Europe, occupying the greater part of the Iberian Peninsula. With Ferdinand's restoration in 1815, Spain attempted to regain control of its American colonies. In 1931, the monarchy was ousted by a leftist republican movement, which instituted many liberal reforms. On July 18, 1936, a conservative army officer, Francisco Franco Bahamonde, led a mutiny against the regime in Morocco, beginning the Spanish Civil War (1936-39). Upon his death in November 1975, Prince Juan Carlos assumed the crown. Juan Carlos.
